

Overview of the ProFeds Program

Helping Financial Professionals Serve Federal Employees

ProFeds offers various layers of support to financial professionals nationwide. We provide benefits and coaching strategies to help them gain the confidence and expertise working with federal employees. Our pre-retirement workshops offer an ideal environment for federal employees to engage with the financial professionals, and our membership provides client case support and meeting strategies to excel in this unique niche.

Specializing Your Practice to Work with Federal Employees

Often times, financial professionals become tired of trying to be “all things to all people,” and they begin wanting to specialize their practice. They start by identifying a group of people who they wish to serve. They may be seniors, generation X, or younger professionals—in this case, it is federal employees.

A niche market can easily be described as a “big group of people with the same big problem.” That certainly applies to this massive group of people. Although they are unique in their own ways, federal employees have the same employer and the same benefits available to them. So, instead of trying to learn 100 different employer-sponsored plans, a financial professional can learn a single plan inside and out, and be considered the local “go-to” person for this group. Meanwhile, they can place their focus on planning techniques and product strategies that best suit their clients’ situations.

The federal market is not a “get-rich-quick” solution to cash flow problems. This market takes time and commitment (both from an educational and a financial perspective). It is important to recognize this commitment and identify ways to make it easier on yourself by determining what successful people do in this market—and replicating that in your practice. Make no bones about it though—this will take hard work. ProFeds can help.

Ideal Candidates for ProFeds

We welcome financial professionals who are new to working with federal employees, and those who are seasoned veterans in the federal space. The ProFeds process has been refined over many years based on real experiences of the ProFeds team, and of the financial professionals we serve. We really have seen it all. We have built a support program to make it easy for you to leverage off the experiences of others who are successful. Like with any great niche market, time is needed to get established.

The 3 Pillars of ProFeds

When Chris Kowalik founded ProFeds in 2008, she had consulted with hundreds of financial professionals who were interested in helping federal employees to determine the key elements of support that they needed to be successful. She was able to distill that down into the 3 pillars of the ProFeds service that remain the cornerstone of our work today—advisor training, federal employee workshops, and ongoing support.

PILLAR 2: Workshops for Federal Employees

Educating federal employees about their retirement options gives them the confidence to retire ready. Holding tailored retirement workshops for this specialized niche market is the primary way we facilitate financial professionals meeting federal employees who want and need their services. We arm financial professionals with the tools to build relationships that are both sustainable and rewarding.

While we get many requests to do workshops for advisors who “just want leads”, we only conduct workshops on behalf of ProFeds members for one simple reason: we must be able to vouch for your credibility. Simply stated—ProFeds can’t do that unless we have a relationship with that financial professional.

Our most frequently asked questions about the workshop:

► Where are these workshops held?

In addition to traditional hotel venues, we encourage you to consider business center conference spaces, and community-based locations like local colleges and libraries. Once you become more established in the federal marketplace, previous workshop attendees may ask you to bring the workshop directly into the federal agency, and we will facilitate that under a ProFeds contract.

► When are workshops conducted?

Our workshops are held during the normal workday typically from 9am to 4pm. Federal agencies have an obligation to provide pre-retirement training to federal employees when they are within 5 years of being eligible to retire. Since ProFeds is a federal contractor able to satisfy this training obligation, the agencies can send employees to our class “on the clock” which is a nice perk!

► How are these workshops marketed?

ProFeds has a substantial following of federal employees. As thought leaders in the federal space, we create content that builds trust with federal employees who genuinely need help.

► How does the registration process work?

ProFeds creates all of the marketing materials you will need to promote the workshop (such as flyers, registration forms, and a web-page for online registrations). We make it easy for attendees to sign-up, and you are kept up-to-date when registrations come in. To boost attendance, the ProFeds team provides confirmation emails to the registrant, as well as a reminder emails leading up to the event.

► Who delivers the actual presentation?

A professional ProFeds Trainer will deliver the workshop. They will provide all training materials included in the training fee (workbooks, evaluation forms, sign-in sheets, and name tags) and will introduce you in the presentation as our local financial professional partner.

► What is the call-to-action for federal employees at the end?

The ProFeds Trainer who presents the workshop encourages attendees to meet with you following the class to develop a FedImpact Retirement Report. This report helps the employees to apply the general information from the workshop so they can see how their numbers look, and begin making decisions for their financial future. Our conversion rate is high (typically 80-90%) because we place such an emphasis on employees taking action to better their situation to retire with confidence.

MEET THE PROFEDS FOUNDER & COACH

About Chris Kowalik

Chris Kowalik is a nationally recognized federal employee retirement benefits expert, and a frequent speaker and trainer for federal employee organizations and financial service firms throughout the country.

She brings nearly two decades' worth of experience in the financial services industry and is the most trusted expert among financial professionals serving federal employees.

As the developer of hundreds of highly-regarded retirement planning materials for federal employees, Chris has also analysed the challenging retirement scenarios for thousands of federal and postal employees—helping them to avoid costly mistakes, and highlighting opportunities for them to gain greater financial security in their retirement years.

Bringing extensive experience in one-to-one coaching, providing solutions to hundreds of challenging benefits cases, and conducting dozens of inspiring live training events—Chris has helped equip federal employees with confidence to make sound retirement planning decisions. That confidence is based on a clear understanding of how the benefits work, how they apply to the employee, and what financial impact the employee will feel from his or her decisions.

Because of Chris' background in the financial services industry, she knows first-hand the challenges that so many face as they plan for and approach retirement. She believes that helping employees to take ownership of their decisions—or lack of decisions—is the first step to making progress in meeting their specific retirement goals. While federal benefits are often confusing and difficult to interpret, Chris is able to break down complex concepts into easy-to-understand language and shows employees how proactive benefit decisions can positively affect their overall financial situation.
